A SODA A DAY

"LIZZIE, I can't carry your books home for you anymore," Stingy McDingy announced one day.

"Why not, Stingy?" Lizzie asked.

"'Cause I've got a job every afternoon, Lizzie."

"Then you'll always have plenty of money?" she said.

"That's right. A quarter a day, and I just have to work for an hour!"

Lizzie's eyes opened wide with envy.

"Where's your job, Stingy?"

"At Mr. Parks' soda fountain. I'm the new soda jerk," he said proudly.

Lizzie's eyes opened still wider.

Lizzie carried her own books home that day. Then she sat down to do some serious thinking. Imagine Stingy making a quarter a day, and just working one hour! And imagine where he's working. Why, that's not work! Making sodas, and probably drinking half of them himself.

The next day in school, Lizzie had a plan. She was especially nice to Stingy, and at three o'clock she walked downtown with him.

"Where are you going, Lizzie?"

"Oh, just walking with you."

"All the way downtown?" Stingy wanted to know.

Little Lizzie winked, but she was careful not to let Stingy see it.

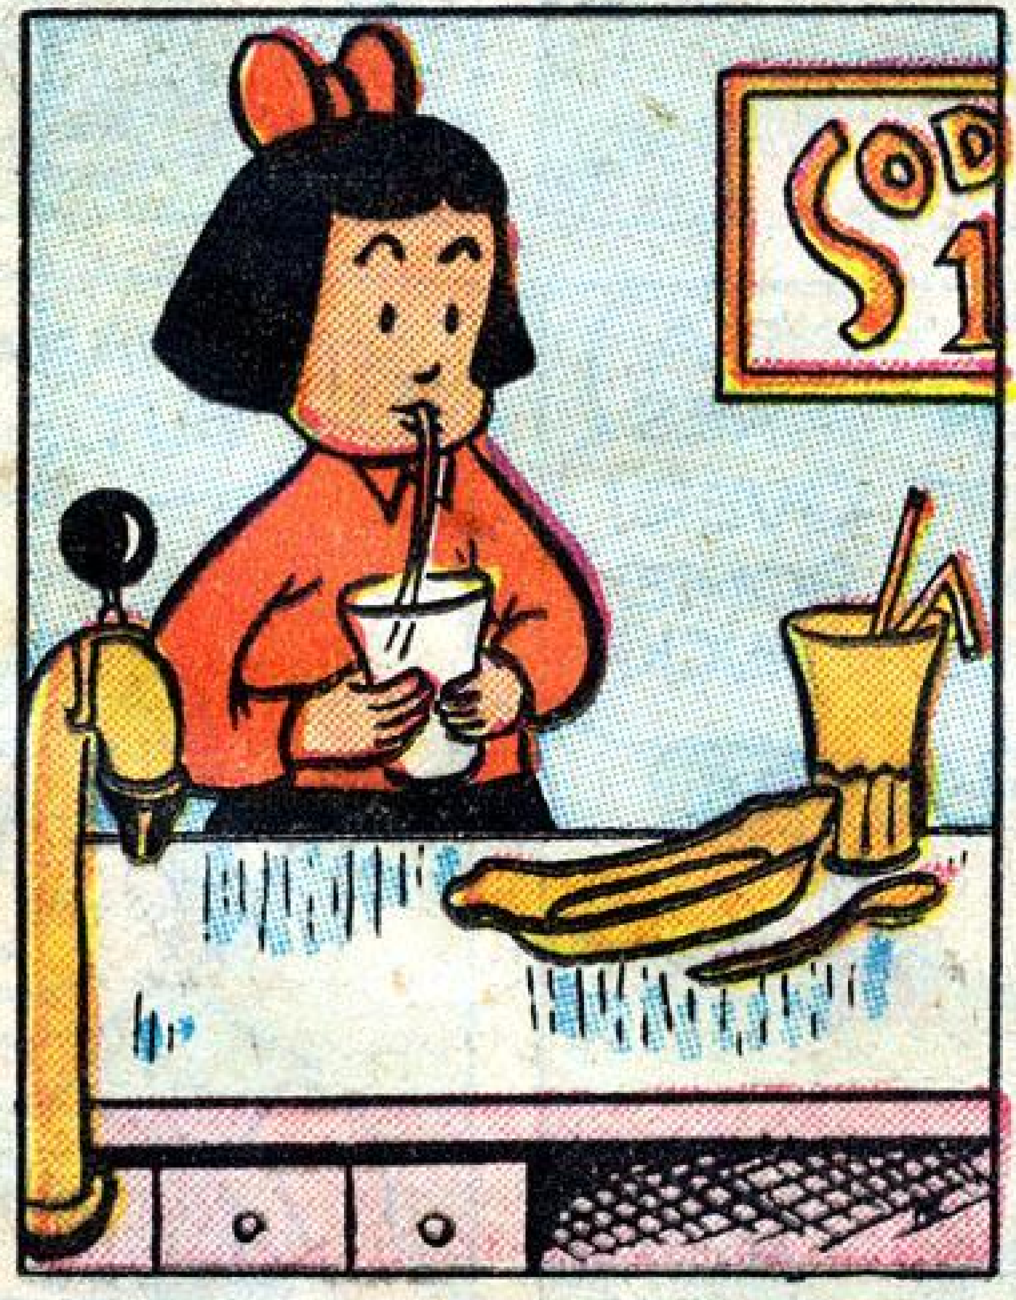
"Down to Mr. Parks' with you," she said.

"Oh, good. Let me carry your books then."

Lizzie gladly surrendered her books to Stingy.

First job accomplished!

"What are you going to do after I go to work?" Stingy asked.



"I don't know. I'll see when we get downtown."

When they got to Mr. Parks', Lizzie put her books down on the counter, and Stingy went to work. He mixed several sodas for waiting customers, and one for himself.

"If you can wait around, I'll carry your books home, too," he told Lizzie. She answered that she might wait around.

"Do you have to pay for your sodas, Stingy?" she asked. "No. Mr. Parks says part of my job is drinking sodas. I drink as many as I want."

"How about your friends?"

"Oh, they have to pay. Want something now? I'll buy it for you." Lizzie appeared thoughtful for a moment, and then said, "I'll take a banana split. How much is that?"

"Fifteen cents. I'll pay for it!" Stingy volunteered.

Eating the banana split, Lizzie winked again. Second job accomplished!

Later on, Lizzie had a ten cent soda, which Stingy also paid for. Walking home, carrying Lizzie's books, Stingy said, "It feels good to make money. Even though I paid it all back to Mr. Parks. Do you want to come down every day?"

"Sure, Stingy. I'll wait just like today, and then we'll walk home together."

What followed was Lizzie's biggest private wink. Stingy would make the quarter, and Lizzie would eat it up. And she still had someone to carry her books home!

LIZZIE'S BANDAGED FINGER

"OUCH!" Little Lizzie shouted as she put her finger in her mouth. She sucked it for a moment and then ran up the stairs, flew to the medicine cabinet, and wound a bandage tightly around her finger.

Lizzie came back downstairs. When her mother noticed the gleaming white wrapping around her finger she asked, "What did you do to your finger, Lizzie?"

"Bandaged it, Mom."

"Of course you bandaged it," she said, "but what did you do before that?"

Lizzie appeared thoughtful for a moment, then answered, "I cut it."

Her mother, exasperated by Lizzie's evasive answers, said, "Stop talking foolishly. I can see you bandaged your finger, and obviously it was hurt. What I want to know is how did you hurt it?"

"With a nail."

"Goodness, was it rusty?"

"No, it was a new nail. Stingy McDingy and I were fixing something, and I stuck the nail in my finger."

Lizzie's mother took off the bandage and studied Lizzie's finger. Her face still bore a quizzical expression. "It looks clean enough. Now suppose you tell me what happened," she said.

"Stingy and I had to fix something . . ."

"What did you have to fix?"

"The frame around the window in the parlor," Lizzie explained

"What's the matter with the frame?"

"Nothing, exactly. Nothing's the matter with the frame, but . . ."

"Oh, so there is a but!" Lizzie's mother was annoyed.

"But, we had to make the glass tighter."

"The panes in the parlor window have always been tight enough, dear."

"Well, this was—a new one," Lizzie said hesitantly.

"What happened to the old one?"

"I broke it with the broom."

"Now we're getting somewhere! You cut your finger with a nail. The nail was to tighten the new pane in the window, because you broke the old one with the broom. Is that right?"

"That's right, Mom," Lizzie answered meekly.

"Why were you using the broom?"

"We broke something. You know that ashtray near the expensive lamp on the piano, Mom?"

Lizzie's mother had an expression of relief.

"Oh, is that all?" she asked. "That ashtray was from the dime store. Was it the ashtray near the expensive lamp that you broke?"

"No, it was the lamp!"

"Lizzie!" her mother said, "I'll have to punish you for this. Get me the hairbrush!"

Lizzie faced the floor, and said, "I can't, Mom."

"Why not?" she asked impatiently.

"I broke the hairbrush, using it as a hammer, before I cut my finger."

Over a period of 33 weeks the weight loss under the Protam Plan was double that achieved by 1200-calorie diet in the same period of time! Here's how Protam works: it appeases the appetite to eliminate the hardship of reducing, and supplements the system with proteins and amino acids for long lasting energy.
